"Syren Song of Xenix" was painted during the summer of the COVID 19 pandemic. It was hard to watch the news anymore. So much anxiety, so much worry but also so many ideas that conflicted with each other. The Syrens do not tell the same tale. This one sees, but cannot talk. This one talks but cannot see. That is how it seemed to me, so when I painted this piece, I made the syrens different. They are decorative, attractive in many ways, but I made their faces different. One has eyes but no mouth. The other one has a mouth but no eyes. Their song sometimes seems like a fable more than truth. Can they be trusted? Can one truly trust a syren?
